Hundreds on West Capitol for 'Earth Day'

By Lina Vang & Danny Thirakul
River City High School Volunteers

The sun was shining, the band was playing, and lots of little kids were smiling as teenage volunteers from River City High School's Interact Club painted faces and more April 19 at city hall (1110 West Capitol Ave., West Sacramento).

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., children and their families enjoyed the city's annual Earth Day event. This year, the event included the Interact Club's annual Spring Carnival. Interact Club board member Joelle Panugaling, one of 10 who painted faces, said, "I had lots of fun at the Spring Carnival this year in comparison to last year's Earth Day. Fellow face painter and board member Beatrice Bui agreed, saying her favorite part was the live music and performances."

The Interactor face painters had 'training' in face painting prior to the event and the 10 who volunteered to paint faces demonstrated their artistic skills on assorted faces. Interactor and 2013-14 board member Lily He graduates this year from River City and will study architecture this fall at UC Berkeley. Lily said she this year's Spring Carnival was much bigger than years past and added, "It was a lot of fun for the volunteers and the kids."

The event also included Earth Day-themed information, bounce houses, and a live outdoor band.

The Interact Club at River City High is co-sponsored by Rotary Club of West Sacramento and West Sacramento's Centennial Rotary Club. The Interact Club advisers are River City High School English teacher Brandon Duff and Rotary Club of West Sacramento member Charyl Silva.

Caltrans agrees to pay West Sac up to $750,000 for impacts of 'Fix 50' freeway project

Caltrans has tentatively agreed to reimburse West Sacramento for up to about $750,000 in costs related to the "Fix 50" freeway construction project that started yesterday in Sacramento. The city had requested $947,000.

The West Sacramento City Council approved the arrangement last week.

As the lane-closing freeway project kicked off yesterday, West Sacramento was expecting impacts on local streets as drivers tried to get around a congested stretch of eastbound U.S. 50 in Sacramento. City staff anticipated spending about $243,000 in additional police staffing and expenses, $167,000 in fire department staffing and costs and $271,000 in public works.

Plans call for police personnel to take over manual control of ten local intersections during commute hours and for extra staffing to help guide police and fire response. The city also plans to post "changeable message signs" with traffic alerts and to install additional traffic video cameras throughout the city (see www.cityofwestsacramento.org for a look at the live local traffic feed).

Some of the mitigation measures will be reassessed as the Fix 50 project develops, and commuters respond with new driving patterns.

A city staff report said that the revised "Fix 50" plan will close fewer lanes at a time, but the early eastbound phase "is still seen to have a major impact upon traffic congestion in West Sacramento."

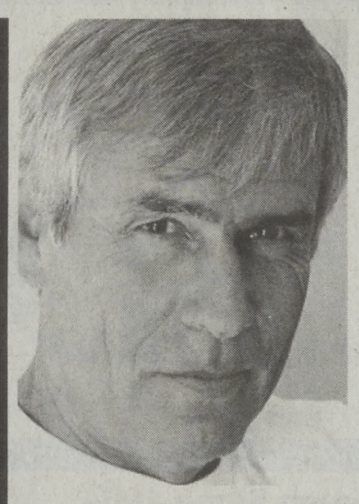
A new high school class, for the rest of us

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

I was leisurely thumbing through the Sacramento Bee a few weeks ago and came across an article penned by New York Times journalist Alan Schwarz entitled, "Daydreaming could soon be seen as attention disorder." And as I read, I learned that experts in the field of Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) think they may have discovered another potential disorder they're calling Sluggish Cognitive Tempo (SCT). In fact, for many years now, investigators have apparently been looking into this perceived problem and some are saying that SCT may indeed become "the new attention disorder", requiring the kind of daily pharmacological treatments that two-thirds of all the millions of ADHD diagnosed kids now receive. In other words, as a doctor from Duke University points out in the article, drug companies could soon be seeing lots of new profits as we do yet another "public health experiment on millions of young kids" who might be suffering from nothing more than "common youthful behavior."

Without getting too technical, it turns out that SCT has got to do with kids doing too much daydreaming and mind-wandering, especially in school, and according to researchers, when a young person does this excessively, it can lead to being a poor student, "the ones with work that's not done, turned in, leaving names off of papers or skipping questions on tests, the kind of things that impinge on grades or performance."

Anyway, as I was talking to my daughter about this the other day she said, "But Dad, everyone – especially your mother – has told me at one time or another that you were a very poor student and that you were always daydreaming when you should have been concentrating on your studies. In fact, you've even told me that!"

"Well," I said, "that's because it's the truth. In fact, when I was in grade school, the only subject I got high marks in was penmanship. And when I would bring my report card home, my poor parents would just shake their heads in disbelief and give me their best speech about me needing to be get my head out of my butt and start taking my studies seriously. At least occasionally some of my teachers would mercifully write down in the comments section that I had 'potential', but they never really specified what kind. And then when I got to high school, the only things that really interested me were sports and girls, and although I was pretty good about attending classes and not skipping school, I rarely paid any attention to the teachers, most of whom seemed to be wishing they were somewhere else, too."

"Didn't you at least like your English classes?" my daughter asked me, since she has a college degree in that subject and has always loved the written word.

"Not really," I admitted, "and to tell you the truth, the only book from the high school library that I think I read completely from one end to the other was 'The Lou Gehrig Story', and that's only because I loved baseball."

"So, if you weren't paying attention in class, what were you doing?" asked my daughter. "Were you really just sitting there daydreaming?"

"Yes."

"About what?"

"Oh, all kinds of important stuff."

"Like what?"

"Well, I did a lot of daydreaming about someday being the starting shortstop for the San Francisco Giants, although if the St. Louis Cardinals had decided to draft me, I wouldn't have said no. I always hated the New York Yankees, though, and no way would I have ever signed with them! And then there were all the very pretty cheerleaders my twin sister was friends with, any of whom I would have loved to have dated and taken to the El Rancho Drive-In Theater for a double feature. And I did a lot of Walter Mitty type daydreaming, too. You know, imagining myself to be a flying ace from World War I, or an emergency room surgeon who saved someone's life, or being sent on a secret world peace mission by the president of the United States. But I was also a practical daydreamer, too, and I can remember spending endless days wishing that a very large piano would fall out of the sky and drop on the head of this upper classman who used to always slap me with a wet towel after our P.E. showers, and I also did a lot of daydreaming hoping that a really nasty but non-lethal diseases might befall my high school geometry teacher who was always so mean to me."

> I did a lot of daydreaming about someday being the starting shortstop for the San Francisco Giants, although if the St. Louis Cardinals had decided to draft me, I wouldn't have said 'no.'

"So, if you spent all of your time daydreaming?" asked my daughter with interest, "how did you ever graduate from high school?"

"You know," I answered honestly, "I've often wondered about that myself."

Anyway, it seems to me that before the psychiatric community and the drug companies come together to do away with all that worrisome youthful daydreaming and mind-wandering, it might be good to remember something writer and educator Jonathan Kozol wrote in his wonderful book "The Night is Dark and I Am Far From Home", that for many kids trapped in classrooms, "the hours that mattered most, in terms of passion, high stakes, daydreams and ideas of justice; all those hours were times sneaked in, unlicensed, and unpermitted."

So if you ask me, once a student reaches high school, they should be offered one of those elective classes every semester where all they have to do is daydream for the whole period, to go along with all those yucky history, science, English and math classes the law requires. They could even hold it is a special classroom with comfortable chairs and the walls covered with colorful posters from faraway places. They could call it Daydreaming 101 or something, and if you're really good at it like I was, you could even earn an "A". I know it sure would have helped my GPA!

Boulevard, Industrial Boulevard, Harbor Boulevard and Enterprise Boulevard will still increase due to cut-through traffic during construction," said the report signed by public works director Denix Anbiah. "The ability to move public safety apparatus through the city. . . has improved but will likely still be reduced."

Unforeseen emergencies – such as a hazardous spill or downed power line – could "magnify by many times" any traffic congestion problems, said the report.

City Manager Martin Tuttle has the power to declare a "state of emergency" in such an event, while the city council organizes any needed emergency meeting.

FOSTER CARE from page one

(FKCE) program was honored with First 5 Yolo's High 5 Award for Excellence at the commission meeting Wednesday, April 9. Her work has helped numerous Yolo County kids find a better life.

Don Saylor, chairman of First 5 Yolo, noted, "The High Five Award acknowledges outstanding collaborative efforts, innovating thinking and a passion for improving the lives of Yolo County's youngest residents. Cherie Schroeder certainly exemplifies that standard."

Under Schroeder's direction, the FKCE has become recognized as a statewide leader with measurable results in increasing the quality and quantity of licensed foster and kinship homes in Yolo County. During the past few years, the number of licensed foster homes in Yolo County has nearly tripled, growing from 30 homes in 2009 to 86 in 2014. In addition, there has been a 300 percent increase in relative, or "kinship," placements. This is helping the county to keep local children in local communities where they are already enrolled in and receiving services such as education and health care.

Said Schroeder upon accepting the award:

"A caregiver has the capacity to positively change a child's life; to let them see another way of living and open new doors of opportunity. It has been my privilege for the past 25 years to work with some of our community's finest individuals – foster and kinship care parents – those willing to open their hearts and homes to a child in need of safety and comfort. With opportunities from First 5 Yolo, fabulous partnerships have come together to better support young vulnerable children, those who at no fault of their own are placed into foster care. I am very honored to accept this recognition."

First 5 Yolo has funded local foster care recruitment and retention efforts through the KCE program since 2009.

First 5 Yolo Executive Director Julie Gallelo said, "They have done something extraordinary. In partnership with many community agencies and funders, FKCE has implemented creative and effective strategies that give emotional and financial support to families caring for hundreds of children in Yolo County.

"Because of Cherie, the WCC FKCE is a statewide model for leadership, collaboration, and quality to benefit foster, adoptive, and kinship children and their families."

During the same program, the City Council also recognized the Port Business Plan Team as the year's "Team of the Year" and the Redevelopment Dissolution Team as the year's "Exceptional Team."

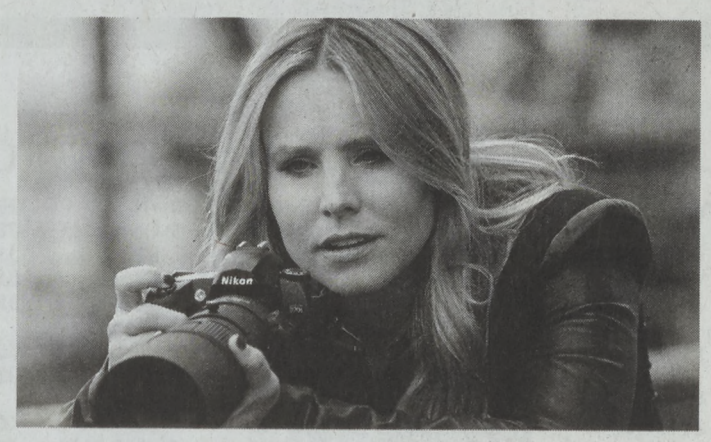
COUCH THEATER DVD PREVIEWS

BY SAM STRUCKHOFF

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"The Art of the Steal" (R) -- Death-defying stuntman Crunch Kalhoun (Kurt Russell) is sick of botching motorcycle jumps at monster truck rallies. He contacts his half-brother (Matt Dillon) to set up one more big art heist. With Crunch as the "wheelman," they assemble a team to fill out the rest of the heist-movie roles. Their eyes set on an antique book worth $20 million, Crunch and the gang banter and bicker their way through a typically twisty-turny art heist.

Without breaking the boundaries of the genre, "The Art of the Steal" manages to entertain. There's the plucky ensemble, the hyperactive narration, the motorcycle stunts and misdirects -- everything that's required.



Kristen Bell in 'Veronica Mars'

"Generation War" -- This German mini-series seeks to tell the story of the ordinary Germans who came into adulthood during World War II, but who were not Nazis. The five main characters are friends in their 20s: Wilhelm and Friedhelm are brothers headed for the Eastern front; Charlotte is a nurse who has feelings for Wilhelm; and Viktor is a Jewish tailor who is dating aspiring singer Greta. The story covers about four years, beginning in summer 1941, when the friends believe the war will be over by Christmas.

The miniseries has drawn a great deal of praise and controversy around the world. The main characters aren't the monsters we're used to seeing in WWII films about Germans, but they aren't totally innocent to what's going on around them.

"Burn" -- In Detroit, neighborhoods are full of buildings sitting vacant and in disrepair -- each one a potential flashpoint for a deadly urban blaze. As urban decay sets in around dwindling jobs and slashed budgets, life-saving public services become even more crucial. This documentary follows the firefighters of Detroit's Engine Company 50. Their wages are frozen, their numbers are few, they're making do with damaged and outdated equipment, and the city has never needed them more. The film balances discussion of the larger issues with up-close looks at the brave individuals who serve.

"Veronica Mars" -- The underrated television show was canceled years ago, but fan-demand for a Veronica Mars movie was so enthusiastic that a feature-length release with the original cast has materialized. Veronica (Kristen Bell) has put her amateur-detective days behind her, and no longer wants anything to do with private investigations. When she's on the doorstep of finishing her law degree and starting a new life, she gets a call from her ex, Logan. He's been accused of murder, and he needs Veronica's help. There's plenty of fan-appreciation in the script, but it's also a real-deal detective thriller that anyone can appreciate.

"Dark Eden"
by Chris Beckett
(Broadway Books, $15)
Reviewed by Ealish Waddell

The Family lives on a planet of darkness, where the only light comes from the warm luminescence of the native plants and animals, and the untouchable glow of Starry Swirl high above. Long ago, two travelers were stranded here, and generations later, their descendants are still waiting for rescue, content to live their small, orderly lives and wait obediently to be spirited away to the near-mythical homeland that none of them has ever seen: Earth.

But as food becomes scarce and the stagnant rituals of Family life seem more and more stifling, restless young John Redlantern can't stop thinking about what could be out there beyond the cold mountains that ring their little valley. Gradually, grudgingly, he nudges his people's awareness out of its long complacency, opening up minds and hearts to dangerous ideas and daring possibilities, setting in motion a momentous chain of events that will change the Family for good.

With inventive language and interesting characters, "Dark Eden" is a compelling and thought-provoking tale of human survival in a starkly non-human world. The planet of Eden is a simply gorgeous construction, an exotic night-world both beautiful and terrifying. The half-understood customs of the Family's Earth heritage have been transformed in unexpected ways by this alien place. But their desires and hopes, their impulses and their regrets remain unmistakably human, in ways that echo through the centuries to another long-ago Eden.

There's a deep shadow of sadness and loss, even a tinge of futility, overlying the story of these lonely castaways. Yet it's countered by a growing flame of potential and promise. The reader can't help but root for the Family to win its fight for survival -- even, and perhaps especially, against those dangers that come from within.

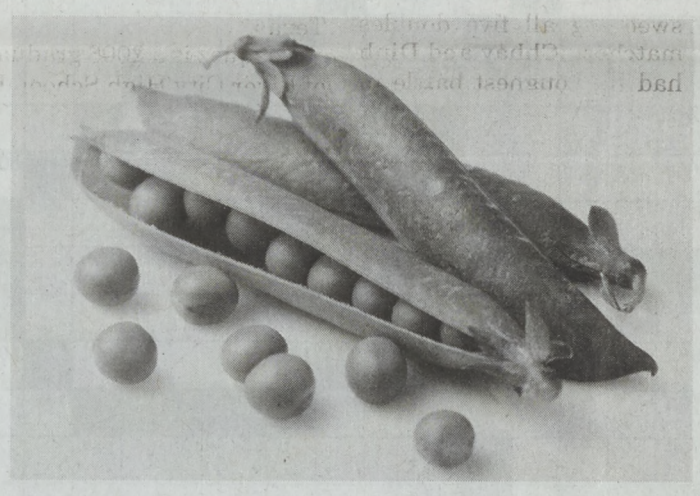
Spring Peas, Please!



One of the best ways to celebrate the coming of spring is with a basket full of small, very fresh, sweet green peas. You know that peas are fresh when their pods are firm and green, so avoid any that are yellowing or wilting. Go for medium pods rather than large, thick-skinned ones, which are more mature and contain larger, tougher peas. Break open a pod and check the peas inside. They should be small, bright green and firm; if you taste one, it should be tender and sweet.

If all you can find are large, mature peas, opt for frozen peas instead. They're usually picked when they're young and tender and immediately frozen. Mature peas are not as tender and sweet as young ones, and they're less versatile. They need to be cooked longer and more slowly, and their firmer texture works well only in stews and braises.

Peas provide essential nutrients and are an excellent source of vitamins K and B6, and folic acid, all crucial to bone strength and cardiovascular health.

You'll probably find three types of fresh peas available at the market right now: English, sugar snap and snow peas.

English peas (also called shelling peas, green peas or garden peas) are the most common. Their pods are inedible, so the peas must be shelled before eating. "Petits pois" is the name given to very small English peas.

Sugar snap peas have a thicker, edible shell. As the name denotes, this variety is sweet like sugar and makes a distinctive sound when its shell is broken. Sugar snap peas can be eaten both raw and cooked.

Snow peas, often seen in Chinese cooking, are flatter, thinner and more translucent than the others. They are eaten in their entirety, and no shelling is required.

Peas don't have much of a shelf life, so don't store them for long periods of time. Store pods in a plastic bag in the crisper drawer of the refrigerator. Use them within a couple of days.

Shelling peas is easy. To do it, remove the stem end of the pod, peel the stringy fiber from the seam, pry the pod open and run your thumb along the interior to detach the peas.

Once they're shelled, the best way to store peas is to freeze them. First blanch them for a minute or two in boiling, salted water, and then shock them in an ice-water bath until cool to help maintain their bright color. Drain and freeze in zip-top bags. They will keep for five to six months.

Peas lend themselves to almost any cooking method and mix well with a variety of flavors, such as cured meats. Bacon, pancetta, prosciutto, smoked ham and chorizo work wonderfully with peas, as their pronounced saltiness complements the peas' gentle flavor.

Fresh mint also is a classic flavor partner, but feel free to experiment with other fresh spring herbs such as basil, chervil, chives, dill and tarragon. Peas are a natural with onions, scallions and other alliums, and they pair well with other spring vegetables like asparagus, new potatoes, carrots and fava beans. They're delicious as a side dish with chicken, lamb or duck, and with any kind of fish, especially cod, salmon and scallops.

When they're small and tender, peas are great raw in salads. Try this delicious Sweet Pea and Asparagus Salad, and celebrate spring!

SWEET PEA AND ASPARAGUS SALAD

1/4 cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon lemon zest
1/4 cup canola oil, or extra-virgin olive oil
1 teaspoon sugar or honey
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground black pepper
1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 heads Boston or Bibb lettuce, torn into bite-size pieces
2 cups very thinly sliced fresh asparagus (about 1 bunch)
2 cups shelled fresh peas (about 3 pounds unshelled)
1 pint grape or cherry tomatoes, halved
2 tablespoons minced fresh chives, or scallion greens

Combine lemon juice and zest, oil, sugar or honey, garlic powder, salt, black pepper and cayenne pepper in a large salad bowl. Add lettuce, asparagus, peas, tomatoes and chives or the top of a green onion; toss to coat. Serve immediately.

Makes 8 servings.

Road alert

Caltrans will be shutting down lanes along a stretch of the U.S. 50 freeway in Sacramento, and that is expected to cause trouble not only on local freeways, but on West Sacramento city streets such as Jefferson and Harbor boulevards, 5th Street, the Tower Bridge Gateway and West Capitol Avenue.

Construction is scheduled from April 22 to June 25. For details, visit www.fix50.com.

To take a peak at how West Sacramento's roadways are handling the traffic, check out the live cameras at the city's website, www.cityofwestsacramento.org.

Got books?

The library at River City High School could use your help stocking the shelves with books – particularly biographies.

If you have an extra copy of a book about such persons as the Barack or Michele Obama, current sports or popular culture icons, people from the tech world such as Steve Jobs or Bill Gates, or historical figures such as Malcom X, Caesar Chavez, Rosa Parks, etc., you can help. Those 65 and up, or with a disability may request pickup service by calling 617-4589.

Wood and green waste is not accepted at the event, but you can look for a landfill voucher in your August city utility bill.

More info: www.WestSacRecycles.org or 617-4589.

The City of West Sacramento invites you to a public meeting at 6:30 p.m. on Monday, April 28, to discuss the city's general plan update and four planning areas. The four planning projects include the Stone Lock District and Seaway, both near the port; the Liberty residential project specific plan for Southport and the Pioneer Bluff plan near South River Road.

The meeting will take place at the community center, 1075 West Capitol Avenue. Questions? Contact David Tilley, 617-4645 or davidt@cityofwestsacramento.org.

Zip yourself a book

"Zip Books" has arrived.

Starting April 10, a cardholder unable to find a particular print book in the Yolo County library system can make a "Zip Book" request, and the library will attempt to buy a copy at Amazon and have it shipped straight to the cardholder's address. When finished with the book, the customer can just return it to the service desk at the library for special processing. The new book may then become part of the library's collection.

The service is made possible by a grant from the California State Library, and is available to cardholders with less than $10 in overdue fines. Start your book search at www.yolocounty.org.
